Notes:

The purpose of this article is to offer a radical proposal : NATO should unleash its potential as the world's premier cooperative and collective security organization by stepping down from being a European collective defense alliance. In other words, the author argues that without renouncing territorial security guarantees in Europe, NATO will sacrifice its effectiveness in the new security environment.

Creating the Next Generation of NATO Partnerships.

2. NATO--STRATEGIC ASPECTS--NEW STRATEGIC CONCEPT, 2010

Notes:

NATO has a panoply of legacy partnership programmes, which should be reviewed as part the development of a new strategic concept. The authors argue that NATO should conceive of its partnerships in terms of the provision of public security goods, and base its activities on a more explicit consideration of the Alliance's strategic interests. In combination, both aspects can achieve consensus about goals and means, provide greater coherence, and better communicate NATO's activities and intentions.

5. TACTICAL NUCLEAR WEAPONS--USA

Notes:

NATO is revising its Strategic Concept; the alliance is due to complete work on the document in November. A key issue in the revision is the deployment of US tactical nuclear weapons in Europe as part of the alliance's policy of extended nuclear deterrence. Although Turkey has long been in agreement with its allies on the value of these forward deployments, it may soon find itself in a delicate position on the question of how to continue the policy effectively.

NATO's Evolving Purposes and the Next Strategic Concept.

(INTERNATIONAL AFFAIRS, vol. 86, no. 2, March 2010, p. 489-522.)

Author(s):

1. Yost, David S.

Subject(s):

1. NATO--STRATEGIC ASPECTS--NEW STRATEGIC CONCEPT, 2010

Notes:

Is there a conflict between the Alliance's original and enduring purpose of collective defence and its post-Cold War crisis management functions? This is an ill-framed debate, because the home base must be secure in order to support expeditionary power projection. The allies have, moreover, moved away from a static, reactive, and territorial concept of collective defence towards a more 'proactive' and 'anticipatory' approach. Some experts have even referred to a 'deterritorialization' of collective defence. Other issues also illustrate the changing dimensions of collective defence-missile defence, cyber warfare, space operations, the risk of state-sponsored terrorism involving weapons of mass destruction, political-military dynamics in the Middle East and the Asia-Pacific region, and the risk of a non-Article 5 operation becoming a collective defence contingency. Despite disagreements on how to pursue shared goals, the allies may yet demonstrate that they have the vision and political will to meet the new challenges. The question of the Alliance's 'level of ambition' in capabilities is inseparable from that of its agreed purposes and burden-sharing to achieve them.

2. NATO--STRATEGIC ASPECTS--NEW STRATEGIC CONCEPT, 2010

Notes:

The future direction of the Alliance depends on the answers to two questions. First, what are today's security challenges for member states ? Second, which challenges can the Alliance tackle ? This article examines four hypotheses which may structure the debate on the future Strategic Concept : 1) the focus on the Greater Middle East; 2) the fundamental attention given to weak states; 3) the focus on non-governmental threats; and 4) a re-focusing on Europe.

NATO's New Strategic Concept and US Commitments in the Asia-Pacific.

2. NATO--ASIA

Notes:

The rise of China poses a great challenge for the transatlantic alliance. Although the common values that bind Europe and North America will not vanish, increasing demands on US resources from the Asia-Pacific region will erode the pre-eminence of the Atlantic alliance in American security policy. NATO must therefore adapt to the new reality by acknowledging the global nature of US commitments in its new Strategic Concept - and European powers must have a debate about the implications of East Asia for their own security.

NATO and Nuclear Weapons : Is a New Consensus Possible ? - [s.l.] : Royal United Services Institute for Defence and Security Studies.

Notes:

'As NATO prepares to agree a new Strategic Concept, questions surrounding the future of nuclear weapons in its security policy have risen to the top of the agenda. Three of the five hosts of US non-strategic nuclear weapons in Europe (Belgium, Germany and the Netherlands) have called for a discussion on how NATO can reduce the role of these weapons and move towards the objective of a world free of nuclear arms. But some other countries continue to view these deployments as an essential component of NATO's extended deterrent posture. All member states agree on the importance of building a NATO consensus on this sensitive issue, not least so that the Alliance can focus its energy on more pressing strategic challenges. This paper analyses the policy options that are open to NATO, recommending seven propositions around which the Alliance might be able to forge a new consensus. The report argues that it is possible to develop a new policy for NATO that allows for a further reduction of the role of nuclear weapons without threatening either Alliance cohesion or strategic stability.'

Notes:

'Bruised by its mission in Afghanistan, the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) is entering the heralded phase four of transition to Afghan leadership which offers hope of an orderly extraction and an opportunity to reflect on lessons of the Alliance's undoubtedly most difficult mission. Conveniently, NATO has opened the process of consultation and deliberation that will result in a new Strategic Concept that the heads of state and government will adopt at the November 2010 Lisbon summit. In short, it is time to take stock of the Atlantic Alliance and its future missions. Without doubt, after seven years of Afghan engagement NATO will now expand its global glaze and emphasize its comprehensive engagement with other organizations and partner countries. Afghanistan is unfinished business, however, and the credibility of the new NATO greatly depends on how well NATO handles the Afghan end game. NATO may need comprehensive thinking to extract itself from Afghanistan but it is open to question whether NATO's general approach should be equally comprehensive. It is this double movement of Afghan extraction and Conceptual engagement that is analyzed in this book.'

'As the NATO alliance enters its seventh decade, it finds itself involved in an array of military missions ranging from Afghanistan to Kosovo to Sudan. It also stands at the center of a host of regional and global partnerships. Yet, NATO has still to articulate a grand strategic vision designed to determine how, when, and where its capabilities should be used, the values underpinning its new missions, and its relationship to other international actors such as the European Union and the United Nations. The drafting of a new strategic concept, begun during NATO's 60th anniversary summit, presents an opportunity to shape a new transatlantic vision that is anchored in the liberal democratic principles so crucial to NATO's successes during its Cold War years. Furthermore, that vision should be focused on equipping the Alliance to anticipate and address the increasingly global and less predictable threats of the post-9/11 world.'

'In 2010, the Head of States members of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization will adopt a new Strategic Concept which will determine the future orientation of this institution. The objective of this dissertation is to highlight the main discrepancies between the USA, the most powerful state within NATO, and France, leader of the Allied Command Transformation military command and main contributor to NATO. The two countries have officially stated a closer relationship since the changing of their administration and this dissertation considers to what extent these official statements are verified empirically. The study also considers the influence the European Security and Defence Policy exert on their defence policy. This dissertation demonstrates this rapprochement has been limited by the different military and economic capacities France and the USA can rely on, as well as their different military projections, their divergent foreign policy and their diverse geographical orientation. Their most relevant discrepancies concern their approach toward Turkey, the US Ballistic Missile Defense policy for Europe, and their different conception of ESDP and NATO. The hypothesis formulated in the title is confirmed, besides official opposite statements, even if a real rapprochement between both countries has also been established.'

Towards a New Strategic Concept for NATO - Rome : NATO Defense College.
168 p. ; 21 cm.

(NDC Forum Paper ; 10)

Author(s):

1. Wittmann, Klaus

Subject(s):

1. NATO--STRATEGIC ASPECTS--NEW STRATEGIC CONCEPT, 2010

Added entry(s):

1. NATO Defence College (IT)

Notes:

'Now that NATO's 60th Anniversary Summit in Strasbourg/Kehl in early April 2009 has tasked the Secretary General with the development of a new Strategic Concept, this paper offers some ideas on content and method, based on experience with the development of NATO's 1991 and 1999 Strategic Concepts. It proposes a Strategy of 'Cooperative Security' to guide the Alliance for the foreseeable future.'
