1. Turkey initially requested humanitarian assistance for Syrian refugees in Turkey through the EADRCC on 13 April 2012. Based on document OPS(EADRCC)(2012)0046, EADRCC started to support Turkish authorities. The final report regarding Syrian refugees in the Turkey was published on 17 December 2013, and was based on the information provided by Turkish side to the EADRCC. Since then, the number of Syrian refugees in 22 temporary protection centres has reached up to 220.000 people, while the number of Syrians outside these centres is estimated to be around 800.000 people. In light of this, Turkey decided to resubmit an international call for humanitarian assistance.

In accordance with the procedures at reference, the EADRCC received a disaster assistance request from Turkey on 30 June 2014 at 16:06 UTC. The following information was provided.

2. General Situation:

3. Description of the situation:

3.1. On 21 September 2014 heavy clashes broke out between the Islamic State in Iraq and the Levant (ISIL) and Kurdish fighters a few miles from Kobani, which is also known as Ayn al-Arab. ISIL fighters seized dozens of villages close to the border and advanced on the frontier town of Ayn al-Arab.

3.2. According to Turkish government officials, more than 190,000 Syrians fled Kobane and the surrounding area, entered the country. Many of the refugees are staying with host communities. The government of Turkey and aid agencies work with village leaders to distribute aid to refugees and host families. Other refugees are staying in various collective shelters, such as schools, markets, sports centres, wedding halls and mosques which are managed by Turkish authorities.

3.3. According to the report of the Disaster and Emergency Management Presidency of the Turkish Prime (AFAD) as of 17 November 2014, 221.805 Syrians are sheltered in 22 Temporary Protections Centers (TPCs) and 1.432.071 Syrians are outside of TPCs. The highest concentration of Syrian refugees is in Sanliurfa (80.264 people), followed by Kilis (37.532 people), Gaziantep (33.392 people), Kahramanmaraş (17.209 people) and Hatay (14.689 people). 34,792 Syrian children have been born in camps.

According to the report of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR) as of 5 December 2014, the Islahiye two camp has been opened for accommodation of refugees not benefiting from shelters. 73 individuals have been received and AFAD expects that over the weekend around 500 more from Ankara and Istanbul would be referred to the camp. AFAD management expects the Nusaybin camp, which is already hosting approximately 4,000 individuals, to reach its capacity in the coming weeks due to colder weather.

3.4. Turkey has maintained an open door policy for Syrian refugees since the beginning of the conflict in Syria. The Government of Turkey has taken the lead role to respond to the refugee situation to implement assistances to the Syrians since the start of the crisis and it bears the main financial burden of the refugee response. According to its own estimate, Turkey so far has spent close to 3 billion USD on refugee protection.

3.5. Food. In response to the recent influx, World Food Programme (WFP) is delivering food to the Turkish Red Crescent for the provision of two daily meals to 10,750 recently arrived refugees from Kobani – mostly in transit camps. To date, WFP's e-food card programme has been operational in Syrian camps. However, in response to requests from the government of Turkey and the ever increasing needs of non-camp Syrians refugees, WFP is planning to expand the programme – in collaboration with AFAD and local authorities - to serve Syrian refugees in host communities. Efforts are also underway to ensure assistance to non-camp populations is harmonized and coordinated to mitigate duplication of efforts.

3.6. Livelihoods and Employment. Unemployment is rising faster in provinces where Syrians congregate. The influx of refugees is impacting the local population working in the informal labour market, both in terms of competition for jobs and downward pressure on wages, thus creating social tensions in areas that are facing unemployment and difficult economic conditions.

The influx of refugees into border towns has burdened local communities, causing rent and home prices to skyrocket. In the Turkish provinces of Gaziantep, Sanliurfa and Kilis, real estate prices doubled and rents have increased three-fold from two years ago. The number of refugees also caused a rise in consumer prices, especially food prices, causing above-average inflation. Decreased border trade and the closing of factories further impacted the economies of host communities. The combination of a loss of income from the Syrian crisis and a drastic rise in the cost of living could create resentment and hostility toward the refugees in affected communities.

3.7. Shelter. Of the over 190,000 Syrian refugees fleeing Kobani who have entered Turkey, over 10,000 are located in transit camps in Suruc and 50,000 in the city of Suruc itself. Given that transit camps are available for those in Suruc, the Turkish government is planning to open a new camp in December 2014, accommodating over 30,000 people.

The first round of winter clothing supplies were delivered to children and families in Suruc at the beginning of November 2014. 22,200 sets of thermal underwear were distributed to children living in the temporary shelters and in the host communities. Following this initial distribution, United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF) is working closely in coordination with UNHCR and other organisations to deliver additional winterised clothing for children in camps and host communities.

3.8. Social Protection. Many of the Syrian refugees do not have identification papers because of their sudden migration from Syria, a problem which prohibits their access to available services including healthcare. To solve this problem the Turkish government opened three centres in Gaziantep, Kilis, Osmaniye and started registering the refugees who live outside the camps but it is still not enough to cope with many of the refugees outside these areas who are still unable to register for an identification card.

The government of Turkey is registering newborn babies and issuing birth certificates. This is an additional source of concern for the refugees, because they do not have the necessary papers and the possibility to register them inside Syria.

3.9. Education is one of the most complicated problem that faces the Syrian refugees outside camps. Due to the difficulties to register Syrian students in Turkish schools who have no passports and no residence authorization. Only 10% of students have the chance to continue their education. Their certificates granted are not internationally recognized, despite the fact that the Turkish government recognizes them to allow students to continue their higher education.

The Turkish government opened 55 schools for Syrians to overcome this problem, but those schools are still not able to absorb all the students, who represent almost half the total number of refugees. According to the 2014 Syrian Regional Response Plan Strategic Overview, "some 70% of Syrian children outside camps are not accessing any form of education in Turkey."

The protocol for the payment of Syrian volunteer teachers' incentives was signed between Turkish Ministry of National Education (MoNE), UNICEF and Postal Bank (PTT) on 6 November 2014. The protocol marks the launch of the first national mechanism for the payment of Syrian teachers in camps and non-camp communities through the MoNE, with the support of UNICEF. Camp and non-camp teachers will be paid an incentive on a monthly basis, distributed through a PTT card which can either be used at automatic teller machines or at retail locations as a debit card.

3.10. Health. According to the WFP's report as of 1 December 2014, a second polio immunisation campaign was conducted in Istanbul from 13-19 October 2014 to cover six Istanbul districts. Two Nutrition in Emergency trainings were completed for 15 IMC/ASAM partner staff between 4-7 November 2014 on infant and young child feeding, malnutrition, micronutrient interventions and food security.
